

Dr. Kao is one of the most significant contributors to the field of fiber optic communications. He received this distinction as a result of his pioneering research while at ITT Corporation. His 1966 paper on the theory and practice of the use of optical fiber for communications applications was groundbreaking in its field. Dr. Kao later went on to help design some devices for use in optical military and civil communications.

Tratto da : <http://www.marconifoundation.org/pages/fellows/index.htm>